New York Stock Market

NEW YORK, September 7.—E. H. Harriman's lilness again sent a shiver through the world's security markets to-day, and broke a wide hole in prices in the New York stock market. The violence of the decline in prices here was much aggravated by the fact that rumors were current before the market opened that the financier had actually passed away. These reports were circulated both in London and New York. Their harmful influence was not discipated by the early guarded associates that they understood he was better after an attack of indigestion. The lack of formal official announcement on the subject after last week's assurances that changes would be reported to the press left an impression of a lack of candor in the advices that were allowed to become public and left the speculative sentiment fearful and hesitating.

and hesitating.

It was this feeling that kept the market nervous and depressed in spite of the light weight of actual selling orders that had to be taken care of. It was a fact that selling was notable even on the demoralized opening break in prices. The demand was too caueven on the demoralized opening break in prices. The demand was too cautions, however, to support prices effectively even against the comparatively scanty selling.

It was a subject of comment in the market that the bears were timid about making short sales, having in mind their severe experience on Monday of last week. The large part of the latter which had been eliminated their severe experience on Monday of last week. The large part of the interest which had been eliminated in the sharp recovery of last week, loft the market at a disadvantage to-day in a technical sense, since the buying to cover by an cutstanding short interest always forms an important steadying influence on a violent break in prices.

year, an increase of 594,479.

Referring to the consumption by American mills, Mr. Hester says that North and South they have had a season of unparalleled activity. In no past year, he states, have they consomed so much cotton, and, phenomenal as the extent of the business has been, it has not reached the limit of their capacity.

In conclusion. Mr. Hester says the facts concerning this remarkable year in cotton consumption speak for themselves, but it is safe to say that, had they been estimated, instead of plain, unvarnished truths, even extremists would have been justified in classing them as exaggerations.

In the South, he says:
"We have brushed 2,500,000 bales closely during the past year and this closely during the past year, and this close on the heels of the panic, with 215 out of a total of 786 active mills 215 out of a total of 785 active mills from one to two months late in getting under headway. Most of the new, but not complete, spindles will be in working order before the coming year closes, and, with these on the basis of the 1904-05 consumption per spindle, the capacity of the Southern mills will be something title. 2809.090 to 2800.000

LONDON, September 7 .- Money

Referring to the consumption by American mills, Mr. Hester says that North and South they have had a season of unparalleled activity. In no past year, he states, have they consoled so much cotton, and, phenomenal as the extent of the business has been, it has not reached the limit of their capacity.

Brought Good Price.

The money value of the past commercial crop, he states, is, in round figures, $483,794,000, showing that while the number of bales marketed was 3,243,000 bales more than last year, the increase in money received was but $11,509,000, equivalent to, $5,11 per bale for the excess, and yet Mr. Hester contends that, considering all the circumstances, if ever a crop was sold at a good round price, it was the one under review.

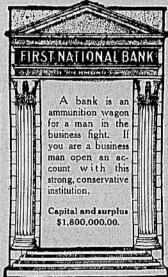

In the South, Mr. Hester makes the
